OCTOBER IS COOPERATIVE MONTH

The power of membership

Now, as always, it's a good time to be a member of an electric cooperative. Not only are co-ops locally owned and controlled — by you, our members — they are locally run to serve your needs.

While many Ohio electricity consumers pay power bills to companies that answer to far-away stockholders who demand a healthy profit every quarter, local members call the shots at electric co-ops like ours. Co-ops aren't under pressure to keep rates high enough to generate big profits. Instead, co-ops try to keep your bill as low as possible while providing high-quality service. Co-ops invest money in excess of operating costs back into the business locally or return the excess (known as margins) to you in the form of capital credits.

And unlike the boards of directors of investor-owned utilities who keep an eye on generating profits for people living far away, your co-op's trustees (fellow members, by the way) have only one thing in mind: keeping lights on safely and reliably and keeping costs affordable in our local community. That's why you elected them. And that's what's so great about co-ops. If you don't like the direction your co-op is taking, you have the power to change the leadership through democratic means.

You may know the history of the electric cooperative movement — how seven decades ago, rural residents banded together to bring the conveniences of electricity to their communities when investor-owned utilities would not extend service. The associations they formed, on the same democratic principles as this great nation, are as strong and relevant today as they were back then.

But co-ops are not just products of a proud past. These days, Americans from all walks of life have come to recognize that the co-op approach — members working together to achieve price and service benefits — can work for other needs just as effectively as it delivered affordable power to rural Americans.

Mid-Ohio Energy Cooperative shares the same concerns as you, our members. We are accessible. You can give us a call or send us an e-mail and know someone here is listening. And at our annual meeting in April, members can visit with us in person and share insights on how you want your business operated.

In these days of economic turmoil, folks who receive electricity from co-ops are lucky. As locally owned and operated businesses, electric co-ops understand the people they serve. Trustees and employees at your co-op share the same values and have the same pride of place as you do because it is our community, too. We act like neighbors because we are neighbors. That's the cooperative difference.

Over seven decades ago, rural residents banded together to bring the conveniences of electricity to their communities.

Slaying energy vampires

Did you know that you're sharing your home with "energy vampires" — electronic and electrical devices that continue to suck electricity even when turned off? On average, these items are responsible for an estimated 10 percent of the electricity you use every month.

Here's a tip that can help you drive a stake through the heart of these vampires, saving energy and money.

One way to identify energy vampires is to look for devices with remote controls — TVs, DVRs and audio equipment, for example. Then target gaming consoles, computers, monitors and printers as well as chargers for cell phones, iPods, small DVD players and laptops. Chargers draw energy even when they're not charging anything.

An easy way to seal the coffin on energy vampires is to plug components of your computer or home entertainment system into a power strip.

With a single flip of a switch, you can fully cut power to them.

In addition, don't forget to unplug any appliances — such as coffee makers and toaster ovens — with digital clocks when you aren't using them. TogetherWe-

Save.com estimates that pulling plugs and employing power strips can save you over $200 in electric bills per year.

ENERGY AUDIT CASE STUDY: WINDOWS

Last month's energy audit case study examined the attic access, a frequently overlooked source of air infiltration in the home. This month, we take on windows — the top concern of most members who have an energy audit performed in their home.

Windows are prime areas for unconditioned air movement, but can also be costly to replace. An energy audit can show you which energy-efficient upgrades will provide the best return on your investment. In several cases, the blower door test portion of the energy audit reveals a draft around windows to be caused by improper sealing or insulation behind a window's trim, rather than a poorly functioning window.

Members can improve the efficiency of drafty windows by taking the following steps:

- Use shades and heavy drapes.
- Make sure windows are locked and shut tightly (this is another easy-to-remedy problem, commonly found during energy audits).
- Use weatherstripping to help create a tighter seal if necessary.
- Install interior storm windows.
- If considering installing new windows, check for energy performance ratings and available tax credits at www.energystar.gov.

Infrared images highlight cool air entering the home from the corners of dining room windows.

Preparing for the winter heating season? Find out where your energy upgrade dollars will provide the best return by scheduling an energy audit with Mid-Ohio Energy Cooperative.

Weatherize before winter weather moves in

SOURCE: TOUCHSTONE ENERGY® COOPERATIVES' HOME ENERGY SAVINGS GUIDE

Weatherization — the process of sealing air leaks and properly insulating a home — can produce valuable energy savings. Here are a few of those improvements, as well as general tips, that can help make your home more energy efficient:

HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING

Heating and air conditioning uses the largest chunk of your home energy dollars. Keep them running “lean and mean.”

- HVAC systems should be checked by a technician to verify they are moving the correct amount of air.
- Check heat pump and air conditioning systems to verify they are charged in accordance with manufacturers' guidelines.
- Inside and outside coils should be kept clean and free of debris.
- Return filters should be changed monthly.
- Have an HVAC technician check carefully for duct leaks. Seal any leaks with fiberglass mesh and mastic sealant.

AIR INFILTRATION

Air that transfers in and out of homes through cracks, crevices and holes can increase energy consumption. Here are some helpful tips to avoid air infiltration:

- Seal around pipe penetration coming through walls.
- During hot and cold weather, ensure windows are closed tightly and locked.
- Ensure weatherstripping around doors and windows is tight.
- The fireplace's flue should be closed tightly when not in use, with a sign hanging from the flue to signal it is closed.
- Check the ceiling behind the cornice of built-in bookshelves for holes cut during construction.
- Drop-down, disappearing stairways should fit tightly into the ceiling and be carefully weatherstripped.
- Whole-house attic fans should be sealed tightly during the winter.
- Make sure your outside dryer vent door closes when the dryer is not in use. Clean away lint periodically.

INSULATION

Use home remodeling projects as a convenient means to add more insulation to existing cavities. Different insulation requires different installation techniques — follow what is recommended by the manufacturer.

- If you have R-19 or less insulation in your attic, consider bringing it up to R-49 in cold climates.
- In cold climates, if you have R-11 or less floor insulation, consider bringing it up to R-25.
- Blown-in wet cellulose or high-density foam insulation can stop infiltration better than fiberglass.
- Proper installation of insulation should prevent moisture in your walls.
- Perimeter insulation around crawl spaces, basements and ceiling insulation are the most important places to have adequate insulation.
- During construction, seal all openings, plates and walls with foam or caulk.
- Insulate and seal ducts in attics, crawl spaces, garages and other unheated areas.

Beware of bogus energy-saving devices

“If a product sounds too good to be true when it comes to energy savings, it probably is.” This is the solid advice offered by the Cooperative Research Network (CRN) after a recent study of devices boasting quick-fix energy savings. The report investigated these so-called energy-saving products and their enthusiastic sales pitches, finding several products and claims to be misleading — and potentially dangerous.

When the weather starts to cool and energy usage rises, members may be tempted by advertisements that claim to “cut utility bills in half” or promise “quick and easy savings.” But buyer beware — those who are taken in by these claims are often disappointed and can even be exposed to serious electrical hazards. The CRN report investigates these products, which ended up ranging from deceptive and ineffective to illegal but effective.

Looking Out for You

One example includes a $200 plug-in device said to trim electric consumption and extend the life of appliances, yet was found to reduce use by no more than 0.06 percent in the average home. Another product requires consumers to tamper with the meter to install a device designed to bypass power flowing into a home. By installing this device, the consumer is essentially stealing electricity. In addition to being illegal, meter tampering is also extremely dangerous. Members should leave any meter work up to the cooperative and refrain from any alterations around the meter.

If you are looking to reduce energy costs please keep in mind that the appliances, tools and other electronic devices in your home require a certain amount of electricity to operate — a fact that no “miracle” remedy can change. The best way to save is by focusing on energy efficiency and reputable Energy Star appliances. Find tried-and-true efficiency and conservation tips by visiting us online at www.midohioenergy.com or by contacting our offices.

Generator safety

FROM THE RURAL ELECTRICITY RESOURCE COUNCIL (WWW.RERC.ORG)

Standby generators can provide relief and convenience during a power outage, but they can also be hazardous if used improperly. To keep your family safe when using a standby generator, please follow these basic rules.

1. Never operate a portable generator inside a home, garage or other closed building.

Just like your car’s engine, your generator produces carbon monoxide when it’s running. This is an odorless, invisible and deadly gas that can overtake you in a matter of minutes.

2. Never plug a portable electric generator into a regular household outlet or breaker box.

Connecting your generator directly to your home’s circuitry can send electricity back through power lines, creating a lethal hazard for crews working on lines that are thought to be de-energized. Connect individual appliances directly to the portable generator’s receptacle outlet.

3. Permanently installed generators for homes or businesses should only be installed by a certified electrician with a properly wired transfer switch.

An experienced installer will determine proper sizing of the generator, transfer switch and conductors. Rather than extension cords, the generator will provide power to critical loads through a transfer switch and wiring that is now part of the home’s electrical system. A certified installer will install the generator away from the home to eliminate the issue of carbon monoxide.

National grid test could affect older clocks

Just as watches sometimes run fast or slow and must be adjusted, older electric clocks use the electrical current's frequency to stay accurate. To make this work, the electric grid's frequency must be regularly corrected for "time errors" — in essence, steps taken at power plants help older electric clocks tick properly.

However, in mid-July, the North American Electric Reliability Corporation (NERC), the nation's power grid watchdog, started a yearlong field test to discover if Time Error Corrections (TECs), which have been performed since 1930, actually hurt electric system reliability.

"To keep electricity flowing smoothly, we must maintain a stable frequency level," explains Pat O'Loughlin, chief operating officer and vice president of Engineering and Power Supply at Buckeye Power, which generates electricity for members of Mid-Ohio Energy Cooperative.

The electric grid runs in something called cycles, or Hertz (Hz) — 60 cycles per second. That standard is used to match the 60 seconds per minute that keeps time. Older electric clocks depend on that standard to remain accurate. Newer clocks have chips and other electronics in them that stay accurate independent of the 60-Hz standard.

"To adjust for fast time errors, the frequency is lowered slightly from 60 Hz to 59.98 Hz," explains O'Loughlin. "The concern is that during a time adjustment, which can take several hours, the frequency is already below normal. If a problem during that time drives frequency levels even lower, it could trigger emergency load-shedding measures."

The NERC field trial will suspend time corrections in favor of stabilizing the grid's frequency. As a side effect, older alarm clocks and some appliance clocks may lose track of time a few seconds a day. By July 2012, it's possible an affected clock could run up to 20 minutes fast in the Eastern U.S. unless the owner corrects the time manually. Members can check the official time at www.time.gov.

Most newer appliances and clocks no longer rely on electric current to keep time.

NERC has a plan in place to resume TEC if a reliability issue develops. Buckeye Power will continue to monitor the trial closely.

Time Error Corrections are performed to keep older clocks from running too fast. During NERC's field trial, these older clocks could run up to 20 minutes fast by July 2012. Newer clocks with chips and electronics will not be affected.

The cooperative difference

Every October since 1930, not-for-profit cooperatives of all stripes have celebrated Cooperative Month. During this time, it makes sense to highlight the qualities that make electric cooperatives different from other types of utilities and businesses.

For starters, electric co-ops are owned by those they serve. That's why those who receive electric service from us are called members, not customers. Without members, there would be no Mid-Ohio Energy Cooperative.

Members maintain democratic control of our co-op, which means they elect fellow members to represent them on the board of trustees every year at our annual meeting. As a bonus, co-op members can even receive special benefits. We also return margins ("profits") to our members in the form of capital credits.

One principle that sets us apart from other businesses is our concern for community. As a cooperative, we have a special responsibility to support the areas in which our members live and work. From sponsoring a local school's baseball team to supporting new jobs and industry through our economic development efforts, we stand as a driving force in our community.

Of course, co-ops span all industries, including credit unions, dairy operations, health care, housing and much more. There are more than 29,000 co-ops across the nation. And not all are small or rural. Just look at nationally known co-ops like Sunkist, Ace Hardware and Land O' Lakes.

Overall, co-ops are more accessible than other types of businesses. We give our members a voice, and we are local — living and working alongside those we serve. That's the cooperative difference.

The Seven Cooperative Principles

Cooperatives around the world generally operate according to the same core principles and values, adopted by the International Cooperative Alliance in 1995. The International Cooperative Alliance is a global membership association of co-ops and co-op support organizations. Cooperatives trace the roots of these principles to the first modern cooperative founded in Rochdale, England, in 1844.

1. Voluntary and Open Membership

Cooperatives are voluntary organizations, open to all people able to use their services and willing to accept the responsibilities of membership, without gender, social, racial, political or religious discrimination.

2. Democratic Member Control

Cooperatives are democratic organizations controlled by their members — those who buy the goods or use the services of the cooperative — who actively participate in setting policies and making decisions.

3. Members' Economic Participation

Members contribute equally to, and democratically control, the capital of the cooperative. This benefits members in proportion to the business they conduct with the cooperative, rather than on the capital invested.

4. Autonomy and Independence

Cooperatives are autonomous, self-help organizations controlled by their members. If the co-op enters into agreements with other organizations or raises capital from external sources, it is done so based on terms that ensure democratic control by the members and maintain the cooperative's autonomy.

5. Education, Training and Information

Cooperatives provide education and training for members, elected representatives, managers and employees so they can contribute effectively to the development of their cooperative. Members also inform the general public about the nature and benefits of cooperatives.

6. Cooperation Among Cooperatives

Cooperatives serve their members most effectively and strengthen the cooperative movement by working together through local, national, regional and international structures.

7. Concern for Community

While focusing on member needs, cooperatives work for the sustainable development of communities through policies and programs accepted by the members.

Cash for Addresses

You could win a cash prize for helping Mid-Ohio Energy locate former members from this list. Each former member is due a capital patronage check for a share of the margins earned by the cooperative during the years they lived on the system. Vouchers were sent to the last known addresses but were returned by the postal service as undeliverable.

We are asking for your help in locating people from the list so we can give them their checks. Your name will be entered once for each name you help us locate from the list. A drawing will be held to determine the winners of the "Cash for Addresses Contest." First prize is $35, second is $25 and third is $15. You may choose cash or a credit toward your energy bill. The more names you help us find, the greater your chances of winning.

Send the names and addresses to: Mid-Ohio Energy Cooperative, Inc., 555 W. Franklin Street, P.O. Box 224, Kenton, OH 43326-0224. You may also take the information to the Kenton or Marion office of the cooperative.

Several thousand dollars are refunded annually through help received in this contest. Thanks to each of you who have helped us with this contest the past several years.
